“ Although we got to know each other in the workplace, got to know a little about his background, quirks, etc. When I knew him he showed a lot of the good qualities you miss as a kid growing up. Getting to know him didn't always come easily. He did his best to look after Sharron, and others. . Peaches, and the kids along with other family members, were not far from the conversation either. When he worked he seemed to always put himself into his work. what little I knew of his background, shortcomings included, overall he tried to make where he came from proud. That was the man I knew. things won't be the same without him. This past year hand more has dealt our family a blow too, among other things.
