“ When I began working at Best Buy, Cory was the first person I truly felt comfortable around. He consistently brought enthusiasm to work and was always eager to share his knowledge of technology, guiding me with patience and care, almost like a mentor. As someone who was completely new to the technology industry, Cory made the learning process feel approachable, encouraging me to grow at a steady pace and never making me feel inadequate for not knowing something.

Cory was the kind of person you could turn to when you were new; someone who genuinely understood challenges, respected that people have lives outside of work, and treated others with empathy and kindness. His impact on my life is difficult to put into words. I was unaware of this tragedy and returned to Best Buy from college expecting to see Cory again; coming to find of his passing was absolutely heartbreaking.

I will always carry with me the advice and wisdom he shared before leaving for college, advice he offered with the care of a father figure. My deepest condolences go out to his family, especially his son. I want them to know that Cory made a lasting impact on my life and played a significant role in helping me become the confident person I am today.

Thank you, Cory. Rest in peace.

“ Cory was a man who brought light into so many lives, and the world will certainly be a darker place without him. As a manager, he was fiercely loyal to his employees, always willing to picked up for each and everyone . It was a privilege to work side-by-side with him and witness his heart of gold, even when his stubborn streak came out. He enjoyed sharing stories from his time in the Navy and lessons about life, forgiveness, and not holding onto anger. He was a man who truly practiced what he preached.

More than anything, Corey was a loving father. He spoke of his son with so much pride, and the love he had for his family was undeniable. He leaves behind a legacy of kindness, integrity, and a powerful sense of right and wrong that inspired everyone who knew him. He will be remembered not just for his great leadership but for his profound ability to touch people's lives with his generosity and genuine spirit.
