“ *My dear Justin,
One year ago today I received a phone call no mother EVER wants to get. A phone call that would change my life forever...and the lives of your loved ones and friends too! The call from the hospital was to ask for my consent for your emergency brain surgery. My answer was immediate and emphatic! Yes, of course! I was told a mass was found on the MRI. Four days later we were told the horrific diagnosis -- terminal Glioblastoma. I knew your life would be taken too soon and it was devastating...for everyone.
There is NO way to prepare for a child's death. It is just impossible. I can't even imagine what must have been going through your mind. I know you wanted to live and you tried to fight, but all the other complicating factors made that impossible. Beating your cancer was not to be.
I'm grateful for my medical education so grief and the grieving process was not unfamiliar. It is, however, very different when it hits home. I miss you and think of you each and every day. It's amazing how many everyday things remind me of you ("God Winks" I'm told). They have become pleasant surprises! Rest in peace, dear Son! I love you forever!*

“ Happy Birthday, Justin...

It has been a day full of memories today from the day of your birth to the day you left this life to enter a new dimension...memories big and small, happy and sad, hopeful and disappointing. But always filled with love, an unconditional love only a mother knows and feels for her child her precious child.

I went to a watch party for the partial eclipse here yesterday, the eclipse I mentioned to you mid 2022. I thought it would be fun to celebrate your upcoming hip replacement and your birthday too. Lord knows neither one of us could have guessed you wouldn't be here...However, yesterdays eclipse was a very spiritual experience in that I could feel your presence all around and I was at peace...I couldn't help but wonder how curious you were about astronomy since I found your 1993 EPCOT Sky Calendar in your things. I wish I could have had a conversation with you about the calendar... I wish I could have ANY kind of conversation with you that involved your amazing intelligence, your thoughts and opinions about the future, your plans after your new hip, your dreams... but those conversations weren't meant to be because I had NO idea how sick you were BEFORE the hip thing and the cancer...I am so sorry you suffered so much for so long. As your mother I wish I could have protected you but we all know that wasn't possible. Still.... Your suffering is over and you're at peace now. That brings me peace as well. I Love You, Justin

“ I don't know what grief will look like tomorrow.
But I'll face it.
I'll feel it.
As your memory washes over me.
One day at a time.
One wave at a time.
For such a love,
Grief is the price of admission.
The cost of the human condition.
So, I'll pay it over and over again
Until I see you again.
The love was worth it. ~Liz Newman

My words can't begin to describe my grief better than these.
I have loved you unconditionally since your birth and now until we meet again.
Your Loving Mother
