“ Not sure where to start...I remember to this day Jim’s phone call telling me Tyler had arrived in this world. Since he was early, I was a little shocked, but then the world was ready for this young man. Remember meeting him for the first time and how much your dad loved talking to him on the floor. Fun times of taking him to daycare and he pointed out the Nike swish; the time he walked off with the remote and it took a lot of looking but you finally managed to find it; how he knew all the race cars and drivers; becoming a big brother; making Christmas ornaments with the melted crayons in the balls; last time I saw him at the State Fair and how grown up he was; teasing Emily. I am so sorry, he had a such a great smile. I can’t begin to imagine the loss you feel. There will be up days and down days...just know there are so many people who love and care about the three of you. Keep him with you always by sharing stories, funny things he did or said. Smile at those times, cry when you need to....Love you, keeping you close in my heart. Pam Fogle
