“ So many memories involving Wayne. Most notably, Wayne became my first real hero when I was 4 and pedaled my toy tractor into one of the legendary snow drifts that Grand Island used to get. I was not able to extract it and was becoming very upset like a 4 year old would. Wayne was apparently watching from the house and came bounding out to pull me from the snow.

Throughout the years when most people would treat children my age just like children my age, Wayne never did. He always treated me as older than I was. He also always seemed glad to see me.

The one thing that really stood out to me over the years is when we had a group of other younger cousins gathered, he would play games with us. One evening, he pulled out this football board game and kept us occupied and, I suppose, out of the other adults hair for the rest of the evening.
